ABOUT

Are you ready for an artistic snub against prejudices of all stripes? With this new hybrid piece, Faizal Zeghoudi, director and choreographer, puts into words, movement and music, the question of racism on the stage of the venerable Paris Opera.

On the set, five performers including a multi-instrumentalist musician enter the skin and costume of exuberant characters. They take the punch line text by Rémi Bénichou , longtime collaborator of Faizal Zeghoudi. The words are punchy, the humor stripping, the bodies engaged, capable of moving from song to text, from dance to theater.

In this jubilant ceremony, Faizal Zeghoudi fights against well-thought and reactivates, in his humanist and full of derision, a crucial debate.

Faizal Zeghoudi's sources

My research is fulled up by studies carried out on racism on the 60s in American society by John Howard Griffin / In Black Skin, Calvin Coolidge Herndon / Sex and Racism and more recently by Todd Shepard / Male Decolonization but also Anne Decoret-Ahiha / dance anthropologist.

This research was completed with the exhibition «Nous et les autres» presented at Musée de l'Homme and the movie I am not your negro by Raoul Peck.

WHO IS FAIZAL ZEGHOUDI ?

FAIZAL ZEGHOUDI Choreographic Director

After an unconventional career guided by his love for art - dance (Karine Saporta, Jean-François Duroure, Jacqueline Fynaert...), theater ((Actor'S Studio) and cinema (Luc Besson, Marcel Bluwal, Jean-Marie Perrier...) as well as by an academic training in psychology - the director and choreographer Faizal Zeghoudi launched his own dance company in 1997. From the start, his work takes root in his French and Algerian background to explore its contradiction as well as its synergy and to develop a wider reflection on the individual, on how one relates to one's body and to others, and on the mechanisms of desire and taboo. Show after show, his choreographic imagery demonstrates this dual point of view - painful and committed, deep and frivolous – which invites the audience to discover his choreography through visual flashes.

His interest for the unconscious inspires his work. To speak about men and women, to show their silence, their joy, their flaws, to give an intimate look of their ever-growing humanity, define his inspiration.

The company performs in places, which demonstrates Faizal Zeghoudi's desire to have direct access and interact with the audience: unusual places, open-air performance, stage-free in order to bring closeness and intimacy with the public.

THE PRESS

Faizal Zeghoudi's latest creation is a slow rise in awareness of the racism in our societies. An unstoppable demonstration through humor and irony. We've never seen that! On n'a jamais vu une danseuse étoile noire à l'Opéra de Paris is a slow rise in awareness of racism. Slow, like an echo to the director's long reflection on the subject for years. In fact, he succeeded. He is not where one would expect him with such a title and such a subject. It is much further. He is everywhere. Where it hurts, and where you must not let go. Where it is good to laugh too. Because yes, racism, banishment, exclusion, domination are serious. But you don't have to be serious to talk about it. A little lightness does not interfere with understanding. And this is where this long-term work meets the public with mad energy and great intelligence.

SUD OUEST - Céline Musseau

POINTS OF HUMOR AGAINST RACISM

Dancers and non-dancers live in the same society but not the same rights. Noble are the dancers, sometimes veiled are the non-dancers. In short, by resituating all the tensions of our society in an absurd context and a style that has something of Ionesco, Faizal Zeghoudi has achieved a masterpiece with this piece he has matured for years. On n'a jamais vu une danseuse étoile noire à l'Opéra de Paris talks about racism but also on gender, ecology, domination masculine and colonial, contemporary art, politics, obsessions. In short, he does not spare spectator, who laughs a lot, but saw a crossing unconventional emotions, with a crescendo who, very slowly, surreptitiously takes him away almost in spite of himself towards a price of conscience, unequivocally about hope.(...)
